See also EN BLOC.

En-, prefix 1, the form assumed in Fr. (Pr, Sp., Pg.) by L. in- (see IN-). In Eng., used chiefly in words adapted from Fr.

A. 1. Before v. and p., and occas. before m., it is now (since 17th c.) changed to em-. 2. In ME. (as in OF.) en-, em-, freq. became an-, am- (cf. AMBUSH), whence a- (see APPAIR, AP PRAISE). Conversely, a- often became en- (em-), as in embrace. 3. From 14th c. onwards IN- (IM-) has taken the place of en- (em-); and the converse has also occurred. Hence much difficulty in determining in a particular word whether the prefix en- or in- is Fr., Lat., or purely Eng. in origin.

B. The applications of the prefix in Fr. (Pr Sp., Pg.), and hence in Eng., are mainly those of the L. in-; viz. to form vbs. from sbs., adjs., or from other vbs.

1. Verbs formed by prefixing en- to a sb.

a. With sense 'to put into or on what is denoted by the sb.

†Enambush; enchair; enchannel; tencoach; tenguag; tenkennel; enkerchief; enkernel; enamazine; enliche; tenseat; enshadow; enshaw; tensheiter; tenslumber; tensstage, enwall; enzone; etc.

b. With sense 'to put what is denoted by the sb. into or on' (a person or thing):

†Encow; endiadem; enmoss; tensilver; tenspangle; tentackle; enverdure; etc.

2. Verbs formed by prefixing en- to a sb. or adj., with sense 'to bring into a certain condition or state':

†Enanger; tencanker; tencinder; tencomon; endiaper; tencrudge (refl.); tencavour; tencier; tenfort; enfoul; enfrie; enfriedom; enfroward; tengallant; tengarboul; engloom; engolden; tenglanch; tencipe; tencsafe; tensober; entempest; envineyard; tenwoman; tenwrack; etc.

b. Verbs formed (with sense as above) on adjs. or sbs. with prefix en- and suffix -EN, as ENLIVEN, ENLIGHTEN.

3. Verbs, mostly transitive, formed by prefixing en- to a verb, with additional sense of in or simply intensive; also vbs. formed as in 2 b

†Encheck, tenchequer, to arrange chequer-wise; tenclog; tencamuff; tencart; tendazzle; enfasten; tenfester; tenfreeze; en-gladden; tenhedge; tenlengthen; tenmix; tenquicken; tenrive; tenstrengthen; ten-twist; tenwallow intr.; tenwidened; enwrite; tenyoked; etc.

En-, prefix ², the form taken by the Gr ἐν. (Before b, m, p, ph, it becomes em-; before l, r it becomes el-, er- respectively.)

-en, suffix ¹:—O¹ Tent -ino(m), formally the neut. of -ino-, -EN ², is used to form dms. from sbs. as in CHICKEN, etc.

-en, suffix ²:—WGer. -innja, repr. O¹ Tent. -inl, is used to form femines, as in VIXEN, the only surviving instance of this. It is also added to the stem of a vb., or of a verbal-abstract sb., as in BURDEN, etc.

-en, suffix ³, the ME. form of OE. -an, the termination of the nom., accus., and dat. pl. of wk sbs. Hence the termination -en became a formative of the pl., as in ox-en, and was also added to the remains of other old plurals, as in biethren, children, kine.

-en, suffix ⁴ (reduced to -n after r in unstressed syllables):—O¹ Tent. -ino-, = Gr. -ivo-, L. -ino- (see -INE), added to noun-stems to form adjs. with sense 'pertaining to, of the nature of'. In literary English the use of these adjs. is largely superseded by the attrib. use of the sb., as in 'a gold watch'. In a few cases (e.g. wooden, woolen, earthen, wheaten) they are still familiarly used.

-en, suffix ⁵, forming verbs 1. from adjs., as darken, deepen, etc. 2. from sbs. The majority of these (e.g. heighten, lengthen, strengthen, etc.) appear first in mod. Eng., and follow the analogy of verbs f. adjs. LISTEN (OE. hlystan):—O¹ Tent. hlysinjan* is an exception. 3. In one or two cases (e.g. waken) the suffix -en represents O¹ Tent. -nan, the formative of the present stem in some strong verbs.

-er 1, suffix, ME. -er(e), -ar(e), OE. -ere, forming sbs., represents WGer. -ärz = OTeut. -ärjo -z. The relation between OTeut. -ärjo -z and L. -arius is obscure.

1. In its original sense 'a man who has to do with', it designates persons according to their profession or occupation, as in halter, slat, etc. Exceptions to this are cattager, villager, and the like; also header, back-hander, fencer, etc. In some other words, e.g. Londoner, foreigner, southerner, -er indicates place of origin or residence.

2. The suffix became also a formative of agent-nouns. These normally denote personal (orig. male) agents; but they may be things; e.g. blotter, poker, roller, etc.

3. In some words, chiefly of Fr. origin, -er appears to be a mere extension of earlier words in -er denoting trades or offices; e.g. caterer, fruiterer, etc.

4. The suffix -er is also used to form sbs. serving as adaptations of L. types in -logus, -graphus; e.g. chronologer, biographer, etc.

-er 2, suffix, of various origin, occurring in sbs. and adjs. adopted from OF.

1. ME. -er, repr. OF. -er = L. -erant, -er see AL, and sample.

2. ME. -er, a. AF. (OF. -er) in sbs. which descend from L. forms in -arius, -arium (see -ARI). The suffix is 'a person or thing connected with', 'a receptacle for', as in manner, garner, etc.

3. In mod. Eng. -er represents occas. other OF. suffixes, as OF. -sure (= L. -aterant), e.g. in border; OF. -ior, now -ior (= L. -atorum), e.g. in tower; and OF. nom. forms in -ere (= L. -ator).

-er 3, suffix, the formative of the comparative degree.

A. In adjs. ME. -er, -are (-ore, -ure), OE. -ra (stem, neut. -re) represents two different OTeut. suffixes; viz. -son, and -son, f. the adverbial -is, -as; see B. In mod. Eng. the use of -er is almost restricted to words of one or two syllables.

B. In adverbs. The OE. form was -or, -OTeut. -as, f. adverbial suffix + is, corresp. to L. -is in minus, minus. The inflexional comparison still occurs in poetry, as in keenier (Tennyson).

-er 4, suffix, the ending of certain AF. infs. used as sbs.; e.g. dinner, supper; user, waver.

-er 5, suffix, forming frequent and iterative vbs., e.g. chatter, patter, scatter.

-er 6, suffix, in Oxford Univ. slang used in joc. formations, as brekker (f. breakfast), footer (f. football), Soccer.

F (ef), the sixth letter of the Roman alphabet, repr. Semitic waw, which expressed the sounds of w (approximately) and u. In early Greek writing the form F (retaining the 6th place in the alphabet) came to be appropriated to the consonantal use, while V or Y served for the vowel. Later, in the classical period, both the sound and its sign F (called the DIGAMMA from its form) were lost. In the Roman adoption of the Gr. alphabet, and thence in OE, the sound given to the sixth letter was the voiceless labiodental spirant (f), or, between two vowels, the corresponding voiced spirant (v). In mod Eng. F is always sounded (f),
exc. in of, where it is voiced to (v) through absence of stress.

In MSS a capital F was often written as FF. Hence, by a misunderstanding, the spelling of certain family names, e.g. Ffieness, Ffoulkes, etc.

F

F (ef), the sixth letter of the Roman alphabet, repr. Semitic waw, which expressed the sounds of w (approximately) and v. In early Greek writing the form F (retaining the 6th place in the alphabet) came to be appropriated to the consonantal use, while V or Y served for the vowel. Later, in the classical period, both the sound w and its sign F (called the DIACRIMA from its form) were lost. In the Roman adoption of the Gr. alphabet, and thence in OE., the sound given to the sixth letter was the voiceless labiodental spirant (f), or, between two vowels, the corresponding voiced spirant (v). In mod. Eng. F is always sounded (f), exc. in of, where it is voiced to (v) through absence of stress.

In MSS. a capital F was often written as ff. Hence, by a misunderstanding, the spelling of certain family names, e.g. Ffiennes, Ffoulkes, etc.
